Indulge in the natural beauty of the Beehive State

Rocky Mountaineer is a Canadian-based luxury rail travel company founded in 1990. It's best known for its daytime-only scenic train journeys that emphasize breathtaking landscapes, panoramic views through glass-domed coaches, high-quality meals, and storytelling by onboard hosts. In 2021, Rocky Mountaineer expanded beyond Canada with its first U.S. route: "Rockies to the Red Rocks" — a luxury scenic train service running between Denver, Colorado and Moab, Utah, with an overnight stay in Glenwood Springs, Colorado. In April 2026, the route will be extended to connect to Moab to Salt Lake City, Utah. For its U.S. operations, Rocky Mountaineer has rebranded the train experience as Canyon Spirit starting with the 2026 season. This reflects a strategic focus on the American Southwest landscapes and experiences, and shows how partnership with Canada brings investment into Utah.

Bridging borders on breakthroughs to enhance lives

Recursion is a clinical-stage biotechnology company based in Salt Lake City, Utah. It combines advanced automation, artificial intelligence (AI), machine learning, biology, and chemistry to accelerate drug discovery and develop new medicines by analyzing massive amounts of biological and chemical data.

Recursion began expanding into Canada in 2021 when it announced a multi-year collaboration with Mila, a globally recognized AI research institute in Montreal. The Canadian office serves as a central location for research, computational biology, machine learning, data science, and related functions within Recursion's global ecosystem and serves as the home of Valence Labs, Recursion's AI research engine.

Recursion's Canadian presence is part of a long-term strategy to tap into the deep pool of tech, biotech, and AI talent found within the Toronto and Montreal tech ecosystems.
